

The quality of your life is in direct proportion to the amount of uncertainty that you can comfortably put up with. The measure of a person is what it takes to stop you.